the control of a part of each day free from the urgent necessity of working for mere subsistence. It may be that he who at-tains such leisure will adopt the definition of this word which is given by the "Old Bohemian" in his cookery book. He says that "leisure consists in the diligent and intelligent use of time."

In contrast with this broad view the cost of a man's life to the community, whether he he cantialist or labore. Is just cost of a man's life to the community, whether he be capitalist or laborer, is just what he consumes out of the annual product and no more. The price of a man's life to himself is what he pays out of his earnings for his necessary consumption. A man can live at a very low price to-day, and if he be intelligent he may earn the price at the cost of very little labor.

To measure the price of life let us suppose that a single man in the Oity of Boston nuts the question to himself. "At ton puts the question to himself, "At what price can I live independently by what price can I live independently by myself in a small room, or chumming with a companion in a better room?" The answer is that $200 a year is the price of a very comfortable subsistence. If he can earn $200 for eight or six hours a day's work he will also live at a low cost and enjoy a large modicum of leisure.

If the man is really poor, or if he desires to save a large part of his earnings, the price of his life in money may even be reduced to $120 a year. But he must be a very intelligent man who can live be reduced to $130 a year. But he must be a very intelligent man who can live comfortably on that sum. He must be rather more capable than the average man. It takes a great deal of intelligence to get the most comfort for the least cost. How is it to be done?

1. Shelter. Two young men can find a decent room in one of several parts of Boston, tolerably furnished, which can be Cancer, Catarrh, Scrofula, Eczema, Ul-

2. Clothing. If the man knows where to buy and what to buy, he can purchase a full and comfortable supply of clothing, including outer and under garments, hats, boots and shoes, overalls, and the like, at a cost of $45—that is to say, within this sum may be included one-third part of the wear of a best overcost, of a best pair of shoes, and of a best suit of clothes for Sundays and holidays; also a good, warm woolen suit for every day wear at a cost of For sale by Laughlin Bros', Drug Co, and Legan & ocld Daw op-shop" order, made at starva-wages by poor sewing-women. The abrica will have paid a profit to the mill have been profitable to the clothler; the cutters will have earned $15 to $20 per week, and the shirt-makers $10 to $12 per week. And the sewing of the woolen garments will have been done in the farm houses of New England, bringing to the wives and daughters of the household a little money income where it is most needed.

3. Food. A very economical kind of life is thus far simple and easy. The difficulty arises the moment we touch the question of food. To the working classe—again using this phrase in its narrowest sense one-half the price of life consists in the price paid for food.

From the best information which can be

It would therefore seem to be difficult to a single man, after having expended $120, vis.: for rent, $50; clothing, $45; washing, $15 and heating, say, $10—to obtain an adequate supply of lood without rooming to the ordinary rule of spending as much for food as for all the rest of his subsistence, or at least $120 to $150. But yet even this supply involves a very great waste if the daily ration be considered in respect to the absolute nutrition required. The scheme of nutrition is now being investigated in the most thorough manner, especially in Germany, where the utmost economy has become, necessary in order that there may be food enough to go around. What are some of the results? Assuming that the average expenditure of working people is twenty-five cents a day for food material for each adult, it can be conclusively proved that a sufficient and appetising daily bill of fare can be served at one-half this cost in Boston to any one who knows what to buy, hears to hear the sure transfer to the provision of the

THE WHEELING DAILY INTELLIGENCER:

The trainings of the best joints of meat are now thrown into a scrap heap and for despending in money that it is a little difficult to forget the rates of wages, sarnings, or profits, and look only at the actual results of toil. But reflection will show that—that for which men and women really work is not money, but subsistence. The price paid for shelter, food, and clothing is the price of things and urgent problem for millions how to get a good subsistence for less money than they spend for a poor one. The way for the working classes to improve their condition is to produce more or waste less. When sech one has found out this secret for himself the labor question will be practically settled. All there is in it is how to answer the all-absorbing question. What is the price of life?

The magnitude of this problem to the people of the United States appears from the fact that to percent of them trust to their daily work harder than any other in the working classes, in the armor we sense of that term, are rectoused laborers, servaits, mechanics and factory oppraistives, with whom may be included the price of tile?

The remainings of the best joints of meat and such as a little of the labor of wages, and the price of the price of the set can be price of the price of the working classes, in the fact that to percent of them trust to their daily work in the daily price of their working classes, and the price of the set of the analytic of the labor of the working classes, and the price of the set of the analytic of the price of the set of the analytic of the price of the set of the analytic of the set of the analytic of the set of the analytic of the price of the set of the analytic of the analytic of the price of the set of the analytic of the price of the set of the analytic of the analytic of the set of the analytic of the analytic of the price of the set of the analytic of the analytic be lighted, and in the morning everything will be ready to be served. In this method no overcooked food is possible. After the chemical changes caused by heat are accomplished the further effect of the application of heat is merely to keep the food hot, or to render it more tender if it be tough meat. The walls of the vessel being non-conducting, the food will keep hot for many hours after the lamp is extinguished. tinguished.

If this apparatus proves as satisfactory

If this apparatus proves as satisfactory in common practice as it appears to be in what I may call my cooking laboratory, a difficult question may perhaps have been solved. Given this or some other cheap application of fuel to the conversion of food, and it is entirely possible to buy an ample and nutritious ration, in considerable variety, in the city of Boston, at not exceeding seven cents a day, and to reble variety, in the city of Boston, at not exceeding seven cents a day, and to prepare it for use within eight cents a day.

At fourteen cents a day's ration may cost, in round figures, $1 a week, or $25 a year, and consist of one-half of three-quarters of a pound of good meat, three-quarters or one pound of bread, one-half to one pound of potatoes or some other vegetable, one-half pound of our meal to one pound of potatoes or some other vegetable, one-half pound of oat meal, one-half ounce of butter, one ounce of sugar, a large bowl of tea or coffee with a spoonful of condensed milk, an orange, an apple, or some dried frait.

Add one cent's worth of kerosene oil for cooking, all but the bread, which must be baked elsewhere, and we have food and fuel for cooking it at $1 a week. This economy is possible in what may be called laboratory practice. How long will it Boston, tolerably furnished, which can be hired for $100 a year, or $50 for each, including the care of the room and the modicum of heat which they will need in winter. If they choose to take care of their own rooms and buy their own fuel, they can do still better.

2. Clothing. If the man knows where to buy and what to buy, he can purchase to buy and what to buy, he can purchase of Boston for food, shelter, clothing, fuel and laundry may be covered by the sum of $172, leaving within the limit of $200 a year $25 for sundries or luxuries.

Either in this way, or by way of combinations on a more moderate scale, like the "Commons" table at Harvard College, at a less price, the price of life may be brought within a very small sum. The waste of food appears to require more attention than any other economic question that is presented to us at the present time, and as we suggested at the outset, the Sundays and holidays; also a good, warm woolen suit for every day wear at a cost of $8.50, to be used up in the year, and all other necessary articles of good quality. If the man cannot afford $45 per year he may dispense with a best overcost, and if he be willing to wear very durable satinet garments in winter he can save from $5 to $3 on $45. A very warm and durable suit of satinet can be purchased for $5 50. None of these garments will be of the so-called "slow-abon" order, made a starva. so-called so-called for want of knowledge how to buy it and how to cook it. Five cents a day saved cent will shall Furitan ancestors than by their descend-ants or by our adopted citizens. How to get a good living out of small resources has become almost a lost art.

Ladies are called dears because it costs so much to maintain them.

Excitement in Texas.

Great excitement has been caused in the vicinity of Paris, Tex., by the remarkable recovery of Mr. J. E. Corley, who was so helpless he could not turn in bed, or raise his head; everybody said he was dying of consumption. A trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery was sent him. Finding relief, he bought a large bottle and a box of Dr. King's New Life Pilis; by the time he had taken two boxes of Pilis and two bottles of the Discovery, he was well and had gained in flesh thirty-six pounds.

in boarding-houses or in workmen's families, is from twenty eents to thirty cents a

How much is wasted in bad cooking after the materials are bought each reader can imagine for himself. The average cost of the materials in the cities of the East is not far from twenty-five cents per day.
On a larger scale the inmates of the jais
of Massachusetts are supplied with food in a perfectly nutritious and salitable manner, the food being of excellent quality, at a cost of materials of from thirteen cents to filteen cents per day.

Probably no single man or woman in Boston or New York could obtain at any restaurant, or at any cheap boardinghouse, a suitable supply of nourishing food, well cooked, at a cost of less than 30 cents or 35 cents, probably more. In some of the factory towns, like Lowell, mill operatives who have their rooms elsewhere, but who get their meals in the
